MFG

Last year, I ranked ninth in this Nissan GT-R. I am concerned about where I could be finishing this year.

The season opener, huh?

It's the kid who was chosen to start at MFG tomorrow.

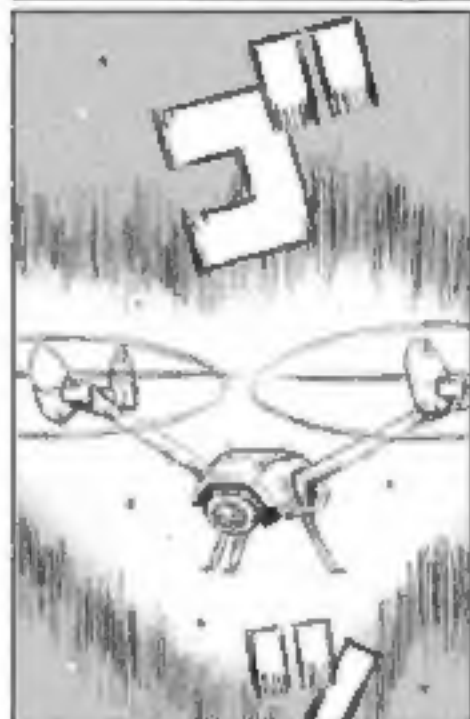

What are we watching?

It's starting!!

Idiot. MFG's new selection isn't that interesting, is he?

So what of the kid chosen?

The video feed sent by the drone is amazing!

Lots of drivers were chosen at a young age.

It must cost tens of millions of yen. It's common that such high end cars get scrapped after a single run.

If the gallery is involved in a car accident by any chance, it's a human problem. It's pretty serious.

A concept surrounding balance of the grip to weight ratio...

I think I know that much but MFG has some slightly different regulations....

Even if it is cost and weight saving, the tires are made thinner, so there's little merit in trying.

There is a handicap for 4WD and midships...

Heavier cars get wider tires....

Ideally having power without adding too much is good for balance. Right now, expensive European cars have the best balance...

Given the current situation, even a top team cannot find an ideal balance.

Engine power is unrestricted, but if the tires can't really hold up to it, that causes other problems...

And that's the reason behind the "Richman's Regulation."

There are always things to do.

From how I see it, it shouldn't be as bad as you think.

I wonder who came up with that...

Why is the grip to weight ratio the only regulation?

Even so, I think it's really exciting.

Ryo Takahashi. He is that kind of person...

It was probably MFG's exclusive talent and chief organizer...

アメリカからの挑戦者。天は天、地は地。こうも期待した。

A mysterious person who does not appear on stage at all.

Both age and background are unknown...

MFG even has a major in this...

I guess you could go as far as to call him...

some sort of genius...

They say he's a pretty smart person.
